"I'll have a quick dinner, put on my pajamas and read or watch television. I thought I'd then go to sleep early. Nothing seemed more desirable than to rest."

He carried out the first phases of the operation successfully, was pajama-clad and reading a magazine when the phone rang.

"Hello," he said.

"Hello," a woman answered, "who are you?"

He recognized the voice.

"You know where I am," I said into the phone. The question is, where are you?"

"Where am I?" the caller asked.

"I'm waiting to serve dinner."
